Stimulation Of Foreign Export Market Sale For State's Farm Products Hearing Subject

SACRAMENTO — Stimulation of foreign export markets for California's agricultural products will be the subject of an interim hearing of the State Senate Committee on Agriculture and Water Resources in Visalia October 17, Senator Howard Way (R) Exeter, the committee chairman, has announced.

"California agriculture has demonstrated its ability to produce some 200 high quality commercial crops and to lead the nation in 48 of these crops," Senator Way said. "However, surpluses which are not absorbed by the markets continue to plague us. Vigorous expansion of existing export markets and development of new ones is the answer to part of the problem. Protectionist legislation at a federal level would, in my opinion, be a giant step backward."

FARMERS ORGANIZE TO HARVEST CROP

With the United Farm Workers union on the move in an effort to force the signing of a union contract by officials of White River Farms, southwest of Poplar, and with farmers, as individuals and organizations, supporting the right to harvest the maturing crop of wine grapes, violence has flared, some 85 arrests have been made including Richard Chavez, brother of Cesar, and Dolores Huerta, a high union official.

The violation involved failure of union pickets to follow a court order limiting the number of pickets at White River farms, where the grape harvest is continuing with non-union workers.

In a letter to "Fellow Farmers," Bill Cloer, president of the Farmers-Employees-Businessmen's association, said, in part, "The Farm Workers' union is at your farm entrance, even if you don't see him. Physically the union is striking at White River Farms . . . our farmers group, along with the Nisei Farmers' association and the Central California Farmers' association in Fresno county, are furnishing most of the effort to maintain the worker force in the struck vineyards. We need your help at once . . . one farmer facing pickets alone is in a lonely spot. Let's stand together as neighbors."

And Hal Campbell, president of the Tulare County Farm Bureau, said in a letter to Farm Bureau members, "Workers are being intimidated whenever the opportunity exists, in spite of the court restraining order and the good work being done by Sheriff Bob Wiley and his deputies in an attempt to keep peace."

Farm Bureau has and will continue to oppose a union contract where the farm workers themselves do not have the opportunity to express themselves by secret ballot.

"Today it is White River farms; tomorrow it may be your farming operation. This is our cause. Those involved are already helping all of us; let us help ourselves by responding with some assistance to the cause."

Farmers who want to lend their support to the FEB association should contact Cloer, 784-0626; Al Childress, 784-7899; Howard Michaelis, 784-2512; Bill Taber, 784-5709; or Don Callison, 784-5227.

HIGH SIERRA LAKES GET GOLDEN TROUT FROM AIR DROP

SACRAMENTO - The California Department of Fish and Game has completed the aerial planting of 213,000 fingerling Golden trout in 119 High Sierra lakes in 10 counties. The trout are expected to be of fishable size in two to three years.

Department spokesmen said the number planted was not as high as anticipated because high temperatures and low water at the Mt. Whitney hatchery contributed to a heavy mortality rate.

SACRAMENTO - Two-hundred and eighty Tule elk were located in the Owens valley during this year's aerial census conducted by the State Department of Fish and Game.

The number of this rare species, found only in California, was down 11 from last year's census, but DFG officials say the lower count resulted from failure to locate an estimated 60 per cent of the Goodale herd in the central part of the valley.

Efforts are under way to determine if the missing segment of the herd has moved from its normal range, and, if so, where.

The Tule elk, often called the dwarf elk because of its small size, was introduced into the Owens valley after manmade developments displaced it from its original home, the San Joaquin valley.

Today, aside from the Owens valley, the only Tule elk surviving are a remnant herd in a state park at Tupman, west of Bakersfield, and a small herd of from 75 to 100 in the Cache Creek area of Colusa county. The Tule elk is a fully protected animal and will remain so until the state population reaches at least 2,000.

Six herds make up the Owens Valley population. The latest to be established is the Mt. Whitney herd introduced from Tupman in 1971.

Agricultural building at the County Civic center, starting at 9 a.m., will be devoted to testimony on development of an aggressive promotional program for foreign export sales of California products in the face of increasingly keen competition from other states and nations and obstacles created by tariff and non-tariff barriers.

"The committee needs to know the answers to some basic questions such as: How successful are present programs; problems being encountered; and what agencies, public or private, stand ready to assist us in our effort. This information will assist the committee in attempting to define the role, if any, that the state should play in attempting to assist in the expansion of foreign export markets for farm surpluses," Senator Way said.

He also said that the committee has invited representatives of the Middle America Trade council and the Pacific Northwest International Trade council to testify. Both of these multi-state organizations, in cooperation with the Foreign Agriculture service of the USDA, are developing cost-sharing export sales and public relations programs.

"Testimony will also be received from representatives of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Agricultural Foreign Trade and the Pacific Agricultural Corporation for Export, recently formed in California under the federal Webb-Pomerene Act," Senator Way said.

Other members of the Agriculture and Water Resources committee are Senators Anthony C. Beilenson, Los Angeles; Clair W. Burgener, San Diego; William E. Coombs, San Bernardino; Fred W. Marler, Redding; John A. Nejedly, Walnut Creek; H.L. Richardson, Los Angeles; and Walter W. Stiern, Bakersfield.

HORSE DISEASE
'ON THE MARCH' TOWARD U.S.

SACRAMENTO — Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis is on the march again, this time in western Mexico and within 300 miles of the southern border of the United States, according to the California department of agriculture.

Dr. P.L. Smith, chief, bureau of animal health, urges owners to be sure that all horses are vaccinated. Colts vaccinated before weaning should be revaccinated at six months of age.

"Although the vaccine produces good immunity, the United States department of agriculture has recommended that horses in Southern California be given a booster shot to increase their resistance in case the disease reaches us this fall," said Dr. Smith.
